Andrews Resigns As Prohibition Director

General Lincoln C. Andrews, Head of The Government's "Dry" Machine, Submits His Resignation Stating His Work In Reorganizing the Prohibition Service Has Been Completed—Declines to Make Further Statement.

Washington, July 6.—General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury and head of the government's prohibition machine, submitted his resignation to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon today. No statement was forthcoming from Mellon's office as to what action would be taken. It was understood, however, that the resignation would be "accepted with regret."

Andrews, in a long conference with Mellon, informed the secretary that his work in reorganizing the prohibition service virtually has been completed.

He accepted the position more than a year ago on the understanding that when the service was reorganized he would be relieved from duty.

Andrews asked that the resignation be effective soon after he returns from London on August 11. It was understood that a conference of administrators would be called immediately after Andrews's return and that following this conference he would turn the job over to a successor.

Possible Successors.

The names of Major General John O'Bryan of New York, commander of the 7th Division in the A. E. F., Franklin D. Oiler, of Philadelphia, former head of the American Legion, and Herbert H. White, ex-army officer and prohibition administrator in Texas and Oklahoma, were suggested to Mellon as possible successors to Andrews.

No Statement to Make.

Andrews declined to make any statement on his resignation. He probably will be the granting of rights to the law enforcement vessels of each country to enter coastal waters in search of suspected smugglers.

At the White House, it was denied that Gen. Andrews had resigned. The denial, however, was accepted as one of the "diplomatic variety," for the prohibition administrator is known to have presented his letter of resignation to Mr. Mellon with a request to be relieved as soon as he returns from England, or by September 1, at the latest.

Mr. Noble in reporting the accident to the police said that Dyer ran his motorcycle head-on into his automobile.

Motormen of Elevated Lines Join Walkout

Interborough Subway Strike in New York Becomes Dangerous With Inexperienced Men at the Wheels—Several Panics Reported—Strikebreakers Attacked—Service Seriously Crippled at Peak of Morning Rush.

New York, July 6.—The dangerous situation brought about by the strike of motormen and switchmen on New York's main traffic line, the Interborough Subway, became more serious with the announcement this afternoon that motormen on the company's elevated lines also are joining the walkout.

Movement of the 2,500,000 persons who usually ride daily on the subway will be practically impossible if the elevated service is affected by the strike, it was said.

Already several panics have occurred, women have been trampled under foot, and thrust through windows, and numerous persons have suffered minor injuries.

At Times Square, one of the most crowded stations, a riot followed the failure of the apparatus which opens the doors of one train. Scores fought to leave the cars through the windows, which they smashed with their fists.

At Grand Central policemen on guard were forced to use their night sticks to beat back men who tried to fight their way into the cars, shoving women aside, and even striking them.

Service Crippled.

By 9 o'clock, peak hour of the morning rush, service on the Interborough, which operates from the city limits of New York to the limits of Brooklyn, was seriously crippled. Some trains were running at half speed, and manned by strikebreakers imported from Chicago, Boston and other cities.

Police guarded all subway stations to prevent violence. More than 2,000 policemen were assigned to duty at stations and on the trains guarding the strikebreakers.

Several arrests were made up to 9 o'clock, but no violence was reported.

Neither the company nor strike leaders had authentic figures on the number of men affected. Leaders of the strike insisted that service on the line was practically at a standstill. Frank Hedley, president and general manager of the Interborough, declared the service was 50 per cent normal. Earlier in the day he had announced that service was 75 per cent normal.

Several Disorders.

Several reports of disorder were received as the strike continued. After waiting for more than an hour for a train at one station a crowd of

Drunken Driver Fined $200 and Jailed 15 Days

First Case to be Disposed Of in Police Court Under Provisions of Section 720 of State Laws Giving Jurisdiction to Special Sessions Court.

Andrew Nelson, 25 years old of Plainfield, N. J., was arrested Monday by Policeman Harnon on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated. Nelson drove down Delaware avenue and collided with the retaining wall on the Delaware avenue hill and also struck a telegraph pole. One of the occupants of his car was also slightly injured.

Under Section 720 of the Laws of 1926, courts of special session are given jurisdiction to dispose of cases similar to that of Nelson, and on his plea of guilty to the charge Judge Shufeldt imposed a fine of $200 and also sentenced him to fifteen days in the county jail. Nelson was unable to pay his fine and was remanded to jail.

This is the first case of its kind to be disposed of in police court under the provisions of the new state law. Before the new law went into effect those arrested for driving a car while intoxicated were held to await the action of the grand jury. The effect of the new law is to clean up such cases more rapidly without holding the defendants to await the action of the grand jury investigation and later, if indicted, standing trial in county court.

Other Cases Monday.

Judge Shufeldt held a special session of police court on Monday to dispose of any cases that might arise and after disposing of the Nelson case he fined Scott Van Demark, a negro, arrested for public intoxication, $5.

Sarah C. Ostrander, arrested on July 4 downtown on a charge of disorderly conduct, had her hearing adjourned to Thursday.

Louis Botone, arrested for public intoxication, was sentenced to five days in jail.

TWO BOYS LOST PARENTS AT FIREWORKS MONDAY

Monday evening during the municipal fireworks display in the rear of the Kingston High School two little boys became separated from their parents. One, "Little" Chap, named Keating was found crying as though his heart would break by Claude Hazzard and his sister of Brewster street, and was taken to police headquarters and later returned to his home by the Hazzards. The other little lad, the son of Jacob Donnelly of East Strand, was found asleep by the police in Wilbur and returned to his home.

AUTO UPSET AND TWO WERE INJURED MONDAY

Stanley Mosher and Mrs. Lynn, both of the Bronx, New York city, were treated at the Kingston City Hospital on Monday for injuries received when the auto they were riding was upset on Hurley avenue near the Sagerdam farm. There were five people riding in the closed car when it failed to make the turn in the road at that point and upset. Mosher was cut about the head and Mrs. Lynn sustained a fracture of the arm and two ribs broken. After having their wounds dressed by Dr. Jacobson they were able to leave the hospital.

DIVES IN SHALLOW WATER, BREAKS NECK

Boston, July 6.—His neck broken following a dive in shallow water while bathing in Billerica Pond, Manuel A. Lewis is making a same fight for life in the Massachusetts General Hospital today.

Marvelling that Lewis survived the shock that snapped his neck, surgeons and physicians are striving with all the science at their command to save him while he lies in bed, harnessed and strapped, with weights and pulleys attached to his shoulders and back, but smiling gamely.

FRENCH WAR VETS CANNOT STAGE DEMONSTRATION

Paris, July 6.—Permission to stage a demonstration against the Franco-American Debt agreement was refused French War veterans by the cabinet today.

The fear was expressed that the demonstration might provoke street incidents likely to disturb international harmony.

LITTLE BOY STRUCK BY AUTO ON WAY TO CHURCH

Charles E. Hunt, 5 years old, of Hunter, was brought to the Kingston City Hospital Sunday with a fractured jaw received, that morning, when he was struck by an automobile. The boy was walking along the road to Sunday school when he was struck.

Fined For Intoxication.

Ray Jordan was arrested on Sunday at Port Jervis, N. Y., Sheriff Anderson J. Ellsworth and placed in the Ulster county jail. Monday he was arraigned before Judge Henry E. McKenna and found guilty of public intoxication and fined $100, in default of payment to spend ten days in jail.

Italian Murdered At Green Shingle Inn

Angelo Qualtiere Is Held Charged With the Murder of Thomas Clausi—Shooting Followed Fist Fight Between Kingston Men and Italians—Qualtiere. It Is Alleged Shot His Brother-in-Law Instead of Van Etten.

As a result of a brawl at the Green Shingle Inn on the Saugerties road, near Lake Katrine, Sunday evening about 6 o'clock, Thomas Clausi of East Kingston is dead and Angelo Qualtiere is in the Ulster county jail charged with murder, first degree. Eight others are held as material witnesses and spent the night in jail.

In county court this morning Angelo Qualtiere was charged by information filed with the court with murder, first degree. He was represented by Andrew J. Cook, and after entering a plea of not guilty an adjournment was taken until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon when the testimony of witnesses was to be taken to determine if there is sufficient evidence against Qualtiere to hold him under the charge.

Just what the facts in the case are will be brought out when witnesses are sworn.

From what can be learned it appears as though the shooting was the result of a brawl at the famous Green Shingle Inn, which was raided by troopers and federal agents but a short time ago.

Shortly after six o'clock the sheriff's office was notified by phone that a fight was in progress at the place but no other information was given. A few minutes later a message came that there had been a shooting at the inn and Deputy Sheriff Edward Gaynor and Jailer Robert Every hastened to the scene. When they arrived there they found the state troopers had arrived.

Troopers First Notified.

The State Troopers were first notified of it at East Kingston and hastened to the scene. Taking a cross road from East Kingston to the inn they came across Angelo Qualtiere and three other men covered with blood on their way to East Kingston. The Troopers suspecting the men were involved in the affair took them along to the inn. On the way the men told of having been held up by four men and claimed the men in a gray car did the shooting.

At the inn they learned that the three men had been involved in the affair. The story told was that the place had been held up by four men and the cash register robbed. The Troopers after learning the number of the car were about to start out to Saugerties when the car returned to the inn.

Kingston Men In Fight.

In the car were Arthur Van Etten, Richard Van Etten, Cortland Van Etten, brothers, and Edward Cochran, all of this city. They informed the authorities that they had gone to the Lake Katrine Inn to phone for the sheriff and it was these young men who first notified the sheriff's office of the shooting. They acknowledged that they had been involved in the fight and that after the shooting they had started in their car for a phone to notify the sheriff. They had washed up and returned to the scene. They were not arrested.

From stories later told it appears the hold-up story was a fake.

Demand for Private Tables.

It appears that the Van Etten brothers and Cochran had gone out to the Saugerties road to try out a car which had been repaired. They stopped at the Green Shingle Inn and found it filled with Italian workers from the East Kingston section of the town of Ulster. As the tables were filled with Italians one of the party of four demanded a table apart from the foreign born men and in the statement it is alleged that the name "woop" was used. This caused trouble to start and in the battle bottles and other objects were used.

Wrong Man Shot.

In the fight which followed Cortland Van Etten engaged with Clausi and as the light grew thicker the party of four retreated to the front. On the porch the fight continued and finally the two men who were engaged in the hand to hand fight tumbled off the porch to the ground. It was then that the alleged shooting took place. It is said that Angelo Qualtiere took a .25 calibre revolver and attempted to shoot Van Etten but instead shot his brother-in-law, Clausi.

The shot took effect in the lower abdomen and Clausi was dead before he arrived at the Kingston City Hospital.

The shot intended for Van Etten missed its mark by a matter of inches. Van Etten claims that he did not know there was to be any gun play. He was engaged with Clausi in a hand to hand fight and at the instant the shot was fired Clausi was around and the shot intended for him took effect in the body of Qualtiere's brother-in-law.

Gun Found in Back.

When the officials arrived there was no gun in evidence and later they were informed that Qualtiere had been observed to throw an object to the west of the road in the bushes. A search later revealed the gun which was taken in possession of the officials.

Material Witnesses.

Deputy Sheriff Gaynor and Jailer Every gathered in several of the occupants of the place and later the State Troopers gathered in more and brought them to the jail where District Attorney Traver ordered them held as material witnesses. Those held were Daisley Williams, Louis W. Hertone, Jacob Feldman, Ralph Magner, Antonio Magner, Peter Magner, Joe Magner and Angelo Qualtiere. Peter Clausi, a brother of deceased, was also brought to jail but later released after he had identified the body of his brother.

Clausi is a married man, the father of ten children and Qualtiere, 35, is his brother-in-law.

Qualtiere denies shooting and claims that one of the party of four did the shooting.

Three curves will be eliminated and the road will be straightened from Charles Abbott's residence to the Palenville highway.

Big Increase in School Savings

Nearly Three Million Pupils Saved Last Year Until Their Total Bank Balances Exceeded Twenty-Five Million Dollars.

Some interesting statistics of the result of thrift among school pupils were given in connection with the recent National Congress for Thrift which was held in Philadelphia by The American Society for Thrift in conjunction with the annual convention of the National Education Association.

At the instigation of Mr. Straub, the Congress of 1915 prevailed upon the National Education Association to cooperate with the American Society for Thrift in undertaking to establish the teaching of thrift in public schools throughout America. School savings banking sprang up as an institution in hundreds of cities, partly as a result of this undertaking, and today millions of school boys and girls are receiving regular instruction on the subject of thrift, while their savings in pennies, dimes and dollars exceed the impressive aggregate of $26,000,000.

The report of school savings in the United States contains many factors to encourage belief in its permanence as a part of the educational program in the public schools," says W. Espey Albright, of the Savings Bank Division, American Bankers Association.

School Savings Increase.
"During the year ended June 30, 1925, the number of reporting school savings systems has increased from 653, which embraced 742 districts, to 760 embracing 1,557 districts. The number of schools having savings systems increased from 9,080 to 10,163. The number of pupils participating in school savings systems increased from 2,236,326 to 2,869,497. The deposits increased from $14,991,535.40 to $16,961,560.72. Bank balances increased from $20,436,144.64 to $26,913,531.15."

A feature of the Congress at Philadelphia is expected to be a report of the National Education Association's committee on thrift education, which is now compiling the results of a survey made in all American cities of over 5,000 population to ascertain how extensively and how thoroughly thrift is taught in public schools.

HOWE ABOUT—

By ED HOWE

(Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

"I know a man and his wife who have a fourteen-year-old daughter they call 'Babe,' although they are properly trying to get out of the habit, and call her by her real name, which is Frances."

They worry a good deal about Frances, although she is one of the nicest girls in town. The other day the father said to her:

"Frances, what do you want us to do? Do you want your parents to let you go your own way, and take no interest in your welfare? Do you want us to give up advising you? We are older, and have had more experience. Do you object to our taking an interest in you, and trying to direct your course? Do you want us to accept your judgment in everything, and make no suggestions about anything?"

"Frances' mother was present, and rather proud of her husband, he had put the case so forcibly, so gently, so effectively, she hoped."

But the mother was flustered when Frances answered her father's question, as follows:

"Well, yes."

In every family where there is a fourteen or fifteen-year-old girl there is a similar controversy. Is Frances right, or are the parents? And can anything be done to settle it?

Frances is nice; her parents are nice. But here is a misunderstanding that results in much unhappiness. Since time began, parents have presumed to advise fourteen-year-old daughters. Have parents always been wrong, or have they been right?

Parents, particularly American parents, have made a great many concessions. Have they made too many, or not enough?

I seem to be seeking advice. I am not; my mind is already made up. And, being elderly, you know what my opinion is.

The father should not have asked Frances that question; he should have known what her opinion was, at fourteen.

An old form of expression used by cartoonists is "The Circle." An accused man is represented as pointing to a man ahead of him, and saying: "He did it." The second man points to a third, and says: "He did it." And so on until the circle is completed.

In most things written about America and American things, you will find this: "Within a year," or "Within five years." . . . This is the manner in which we exaggerate. We are not content with telling the modest truth about ourselves, but hasten to add what we intend to do.

Few Successful Plungers

The majority of those who have built up fortunes laid the foundations of their success in thrift. They began by saving small amounts. And they went in for the larger and quicker returns they might have ended in complete personal failure. Successful plungers are few, but those who have succeeded through thrift are legion.—Thrift Magazine.

Today's Useful Hint On Jam and Jelly Making

By Elizabeth Palmer

Once you have tried the new short-cut method of making jams and jellies with Certo you will discard the old, uncertain way as an out-of-date piece of kitchen drudgery. Certo is a pure fruit product—the substance of fruit refined and bottled.

Certo jams and jellies set perfectly, tenderly firm every time—never a failure. They taste better, are more delicious, fresher than the old-fashioned jams and jellies. They look prettier, because they preserve their bright, natural color. You get half again more jam or jelly from your fruit because you use the Certo which used to boil away.

A book of nearly one hundred recipes for delicious jams, jellies and fruit preserves comes with each bottle of Certo. Even if you are not an experienced cook, you can make perfect jams and jellies every time the Certo is used.

Your grocer carries Certo, or you can send 10c (for postage) and get a bottle of Certo which will make 10 glasses of jam or jelly, depending upon the recipe. Address Douglas-Pectin Corporation, 5493 Granite Building, Chester, N. Y.

People Told To Eat Heartily

It is no longer necessary to deny yourself plenty of the foods you like. The new plan by which New York's fat persons are being helped is now available to the rest of the country. It consists of taking a certain harmless medicinal product, purely vegetable, discovered by science, which dissolves the cells. It contains no thyroid or other dangerous drugs. It acts quickly and is well chewed and therefore it is digested in a deliciously flavored chewing gum called "Slenderize." Local druggists are stocking a large supply in expectation of enormous demand. They say that you start today to "Slenderize Stands" your fat will begin to melt tomorrow.

Eleanor Gunn On Fashions

Deauville Interests the Smart World Because of the Nautical Touch of the Brass-Buttoned Jacket and for Other Excellent Reasons.

There is bound to be a greatly stimulated interest in French fashions at this season when almost everyone is running across for a few weeks. Deauville seems to be as near as Newport, and at the moment much more gay. It is the season when not only the Parisienne catches the train bleu to this famous resort but when Americans are there in droves, mostly to watch what the French wear—for what they wear, Southampton and Newport wears, also Palm Beach and other Southern resorts.

They are carrying parasols at Deauville, canes too, and they are appearing in costume costumes of the sports persuasion, the most approved color schemes having to do with blue and white, sometimes white with two or even more shades of blue. Red, the Chantal red especially.

Smith Accepts White House Call

New York, July 6.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith is ready to head the Democratic presidential ticket. The governor affirmed his readiness publicly for the first time when unofficially placed in nomination by John R. Voorhis, grand sashem of Tammany Hall, at the Tammany's annual Independence Day celebration here.

When the cheering following the nominating speech ceased, the governor turned to Voorhis and deliberately exclaimed: "I accept the nomination."

Cheering lasting almost five minutes greeted these words. When order was restored, the governor charged that the prohibition amendment had been ratified in popular ignorance, indirectly attacked the Ku Klux Klan and pleaded that citizens vote to "protect the minority from the tyranny of the majority."

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

Early evening programs from WJZ, WGY and WEA were perfect until the bean sifter noise developed shortly before 9 o'clock. The disturbance was in evidence during the Philadelphia program at noon and also appeared at various times Saturday night and Sunday. It is an entirely new noise and evidently of local origin.

Another form of pest was at its height during the singing of the Hallelujah Chorus in Philadelphia when a number of gabblers got near the microphone and gabbled. The mayor of Philadelphia was, apparently, one of these. They interfered at other times during the program but were worst during the chorus referred to. Announcers should be armed with axes and drilled in their use, and there should not only be an all year open season on the gabblers, but medals should be awarded the announcers who use their axes most efficiently and collect the largest string of heads.

WJZ is showing itself one of the most consistent and reliable of the New York city stations and as it is well below the usual noise, fat trying, static and bean sifting wave length it is an ever present help in time of radio trouble.

Western stations were weak and disturbed. WLW, WWJ, WSJ and WTAM did not come with good volume until a late hour. WWJ distinguished itself by cautioning listeners at 11 p. m. to be careful with fireworks. An especially strong western station was WJR, broadcasting a program from Detroit, which ranged all the way from dreamy waltz music to "Asleep in the Deep," with the customary down-in-the-cellar bass.

WCCO required a reversal of the directional aerial to clear it from noises. This done, it was clear and strong.

President Coolidge was heard best from WJZ.

WNYC presented the Tammany Hall celebration with fair volume and clarity.

A ponderous orator of the old school was Judge Dover Beckman at WGY in the evening.

One feature of the day was the broadcasting of "Hail Columbia," one of the almost forgotten national airs that was once popular.

WLSI, not often heard of late, was in evidence last night.

KDKA, WPG, WBY and WMCA were especially strong and clear.

Some static developed after 10 o'clock.

WDBZ is expected to sing its swan song for the summer at 7:30 Wednesday evening.

Eccentric jewelry seems to have a great fascination for the modern women. Necklaces and bracelets galore please her present mood. All sorts of attractive hat pins are thrust through crowns or are sometimes worn on the shoulder. One very novel design was a rhinestone scissors. Attractive monogram effects continue to be worn, usually in brilliants; in fact, wearing more jewelry is countenanced more these days than for some time, the sports costume being no exception. The French fashion of effecting an anklet, worn under the stocking, is also being adopted by more and more Americans.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 6, 1926.

This hunting for "thrills" by young Americans is becoming a serious matter. The latest is that four volunteer firemen of a Long Island town have confessed that with that end in view they set fire to ten different buildings, incidentally furnishing a greater thrill for those whose lives were imperiled until their rescue was achieved. Two of the young thrill-makers were sent to Elmira Reformatory and two to Sing Sing, the worst culprits getting from five to ten years, which will hardly be found very thrilling.

THE GAME OF TAXATION.

Federal taxes were reduced $1,974,000,000 from 1919 to 1924, or 39 per cent; while state taxes, during the same period, increased 87 per cent and local taxes, 56 per cent. In spite of Federal economies, total taxes today constitute a greater drain on our national resources than ever before.

Ogden Mills says we are confronted with three very definite questions: First, whether costs of state and local governments are excessive, judged from the standpoint of whether we could not get the present service at lower cost; secondly, whether existing methods of financing these costs are sound economically; and, third, whether our state and local tax systems are not in need of a thorough overhauling in the interest of a fairer allocation of the burden.

FOR THE MASSES.

Some good citizens advocate the removal of all protective tariffs, on the theory that America with her superior manufacturing genius would still be ahead of foreign rivals for the American market. We might throw open the patent field and let the world in on basic patents, on the same theory. The tariff is as old as organized society, and has been used by leading countries to build up certain agricultural and manufacturing pursuits as national assets, and to prevent dependence on foreign supplies.

It is true that the better one does his job, the less he needs a law to protect or bolster him up in farming, manufacturing or any form of human endeavor. Some farmers and some localities can laugh at imported wheat, beef, wool, linen, sugar; they can raise at a profit for less. But the laws are made for the average man, and not for the exceptional farmer or manufacturer who conjures profits out of conditions where others fail. The protective tariff has stood the test of many years; it still stands as the best guarantee we have to uphold American wages and standards of living.

A ROYAL ALLIANCE.

The rumor that Mussolini plans to marry his daughter Edda to young Umberto or Humbert, Crown Prince of Italy, has a certain interest for a world of observers. From the proud royal House of Savoy have come indirect denials, but according to report Mussolini himself "does not deny." And so the rumor persists. The Italian press does not "dare" to print it, but it has been given wide newspaper circulation outside of Italy and the pictures of the two young people have been published side by side—the smiling, aristocratic, pleasing, but none too strong face of the young Crown Prince, and the unsmiling, unattractive face of Edda Mussolini, showing determination in the wide mouth and staring eyes together with some what of her father's scorn.

It requires no imagination to envision the proud old House of Savoy as shuddering and ashamed, while Mussolini waits and plans, fully conscious of his power. Already his daughter is in the select convent school for princesses and the higher nobility, where she is said haughtily to resist discipline on the ground that she is "the daughter of Mussolini." Did not Napoleon marry his brothers and sisters to royalty, and is not Mussolini absolute master of Italy, whose King remains on the throne only by his consent? There is quite sufficient precedent of a sort and the conditions are such as to invite this crowning exercise of the Dictator's power, particularly in these times of the twilight of the Kings. There is nothing really improbable in such a culmination. Meanwhile even the most democratic of observers can hardly fail to feel sorry for the 21-year-old royal boy of Italy who may have to bow to the will of Mussolini—and even more completely to that of his daughter.

HOT WEATHER FOOD.

It is surprising to see the different ideas held by physicians and laymen regarding food requirements during hot weather. One will advise that the food be about the same all the year round because the system is used to it. If you make a change in your diet during the hot weather you may become "picky" about your food, and not eat enough to sustain you. That as a matter of fact many people find that the heat makes them feel weak, simply because they are actually weak from want of food.

Others will suggest that you should change your diet during the hot weather, should avoid meat, and eat vegetable and starchy foods, cereals, and soft fruits which contain water, salts, and acids, which are cooling to the system.

Still others will suggest that you eat the same food winter and summer, but that you cut down the amount in summer by from ten to twenty-five per cent.

Now what are you going to do with all this "variety" of advice as to foods in hot weather?

My suggestion is that it depends to a great extent upon your own experience in the past, upon your age, upon your occupation, and your form of recreation.

The growing boy or girl, living an outdoor life, is going to need all round food, that is meat, eggs, starches, and fats. They will need them for energy and for growth. Perhaps the fats may be cut down somewhat in the summer.

The young man or woman, living an outdoor life of activity either in work or play, would likewise be wise to keep up the all round diet with perhaps a slight decrease in fats.

Young men and women not inclined to outdoor exercise, would be wise to cut down slightly on meat and fats during the hot weather.

Middle aged men and women, whose occupation or recreation does not call for much exercise outdoors, would be wise to try and cut meats to the lowest possible point during the hot weather, and their foods by ten to fifteen per cent.

Older folks would be wise to follow their example.

I believe these simple suggestions will appeal to your common sense when you remember just what the different foods do for you.

The meat and eggs repair tissue worn out by work or exercise, vegetables and bread supply heat and energy, while the fats also supply heat and energy, protect the other tissues to some extent, and store energy for future use.

You can thus see that your food requirements will, as I said before, depend upon your age, and your work or exercise.

Burgoyne's Invasion of New York

Began with Capture of Fort Ticonderoga, July 6, 1777.

The early part of 1777 was wasted by Sir William Howe in dilatory movements having for their object the capture of Philadelphia, the Federal capital. At length his forces were put in motion from New York city, landed at the head of Elk River in Chesapeake Bay and from thence commenced his march upon Philadelphia. Routing the American forces posted to intercept him on the banks of the Brandywine, September 11, 1777, he followed up the retreating troops; and after surprising Wayne in a night attack at Paoli, on the 19th, he entered the city September 26; and on October 4 the battle of Germantown was fought.

But it was not so much upon the military operations on the Schuylkill or Delaware that the hopes of the British rested for success, important as they were, as upon an invasion of New York from Canada by General Burgoyne.

At the close of 1776 Burgoyne was in Canada with a large British force. He went to England early in 1777, by returned to Quebec May 5 following. He came bearing the commission of Lieutenant General, superseding in command Governor Carleton.

Burgoyne was instructed to march with a strong force by way of Lake Champlain, and, after capturing the frontier fortresses in the hands of the Americans, advance to Albany. From the latter point, he expected to obtain possession of the strong passes in the Highlands of the Hudson, by the cooperation of the British troops under General Clinton in New York. By this complete possession in New York, the New England States would be severed from the other states then in revolt.

The vigilant General Philip Schuyler, anticipating such an invasion, asked Washington early in that year for at least ten thousand troops to hold Ticonderoga, and two thousand at Fort Stanwix (now Rome), and other places on the Mohawk River.

Washington made strenuous efforts to strengthen the northern army, but when Schuyler visited Ticonderoga June 23, he found General Arthur St. Clair with but few troops and miserably clad and poorly fed.

The garrison at Ticonderoga, and at Mount Independence opposite, had an aggregate force of 3,500 men, and only one in ten had a bayonet. There were strong outposts around Ticonderoga, but there were not troops enough to man them; and there were emplacements that commanded the fort that were left unguarded for the same reason. Between Ticonderoga and Mount Independence were a boom and chain which the Americans thought would effectively bar the way of British vessels ascending the lake; but they utterly failed in the hour of need.

The march of Burgoyne was at first one series of triumphs. With an army of 8,000 he left St. John's, on the St. Lawrence, and reached Crown Point June 26, and menaced Ticonderoga. He held a council with the Six Nations and was joined by four hundred of their warriors.

At Crown Point on June 29, Burgoyne issued a grandiloquent proclamation to the people, and on July 1 moved against Ticonderoga.

Selling the crest of Mount Descent which overlooked the fort, he planted his artillery upon its summit. St. Clair called a council of war, and as the fort was clearly untenable, it was determined that only in secret flight might the small garrison hope for salvation from destruction or capture.

The flight was undertaken the same night. The invalids and convalescents, stores and baggage were sent up the lake in bateaux to Skeneborough (now Whitehall), and about two o'clock in the morning of Sunday, July 6, the garrison crossed a floating bridge at the boom to Fort Independence, leaving almost two hundred cannons behind them.

With the garrison of the latter they began a flight southward through the forests of Vermont before daylight. The movement was discovered by the British by the light of a building accidentally set on fire on Mount Independence, and a hot pursuit was immediately begun by the grenadier brigade of General Fraser and some Germans.

Overtaken at Hubbardston, the Americans, after a short and sharp battle were defeated and dispersed. General St. Clair rallied about two thousand men, and with these reached Fort Edward, on the Upper Hudson in safety, July 13, where he joined General Schuyler.

In the meantime Burgoyne had ordered his gun-boats and other vessels to pursue the fugitive bateaux. Before sunrise these vessels had burst asunder the boom and chain on which the Americans relied, and the whole British flotilla engaged in the chase. The bateaux were overtaken near Skeneborough and destroyed, with all their contents, but the men escaped.

WHY

Hand-Clapping Has Become Sign of Approval

Every emotion that rises up has to be worked off by some corresponding bodily effect, as a sort of safety valve to the brain.

Just as a cat purrs and a dog wags its tail, so we humans have to cry or laugh or clench our fists, according to the different emotions to be expressed.

When the emotion of pleasure is experienced by a whole crowd at once, we have a further desire—to communicate our own sensations to our neighbors, as well as to the speaker, actor or other person who has pleased us. And the only way we can communicate our feeling is by making a noise.

There are only three ways in which we can easily do this: By shouting, by stamping our feet, or by clapping our hands.

The first method is very often used, but generally out-of-doors. The stamping of feet needs not only boots but a hard surface to stamp on, and since the ancients, from whom we inherit our method of applause—which word means a "clapping at"—did not wear boots and, therefore, could not stamp audibly, hand-clapping became adopted as the recognized fashion of expressing pleasure.

Why Flowers Can Be Used as Barometers

Most people know that seaweed, which becomes moist and clammy when rain is coming, makes an excellent barometer. Flowers are sensitive to weather conditions and those in a position to observe them can generally tell something of the coming day. So true a prophet is the scarlet pimpernel that it has been called "the poor man's weather glass."

Crocuses, dandelions, anemones and wood sorrel close their flowers on the approach of rain. Fir cones open and close as the weather is fine or wet. In some parts of the continent, especially in Germany and Switzerland, where many quaint customs survive, they have a frog weather glass, which consists of a green frog in a bottle half filled with water. From the neck of the bottle, and just touching the water, runs a flight of steps. If the frog remains under water, near the bottom or actually at the bottom of the bottle, the weather will be fine, but when he comes up and sits on the steps it is certain to be dull, cold and wet—Brief Stories.

Why Married Men Live Longer Than Bachelors

Do married men live longer than bachelors, or does it only seem longer? The great philosopher, Herbert Spencer, declared that the apparent longevity of married men was not due to their marriage. The physically and mentally strong, he said, would be more likely to marry; therefore they lived longer not because of marriage, but in spite of it, so to speak. Theologians, philosophers and doctors—even statisticians—have always maintained that married men live longer than bachelors. Insurance companies, which base their expectations on cold facts, have so far been unable to come to any conclusion on the question. They are inclined, however, to prefer married men for insurance.

Why Phrases Are Barred

In April, 1913, the editor of a Swiss newspaper placed a ban on the use of the following metaphorical figures of speech by the members of his editorial staff: The voice of honor, the cry of conscience, the restraining hand of conscience, the needle of remorse, the whip of satire, the shield of indifference, the trumpet of fame, the bases of society, the annals of crime, the chariot of progress, the torrent of passions, the artifices of language and the broadside of pleasantness. It is of interest to observe that most of these expressions are as threadbare in the English tongue as in the French. From La Bulgarie, Sofia. (Translated for the Kansas City Star).

Why Sap Travels

The old conception was that as soon as the leaves drop from trees the sap or moisture in a tree went down. This idea is false, as all through the winter the roots of the tree are absorbing moisture. The highest sap content is just before the leaves start in the spring. It would be more correct to say that the sap is continually going up in a tree instead of down. The water content of a maple tree in the fall of the year is 27 per cent. In the winter 32 per cent, and just before the leaves appear in the spring 39 per cent.

GEYSER WATER FOR SUMMER ACID INDIGESTION

Hathorn Water for Internal Cleansing and Stimulating Functional Activity

Two sparkling, natural, mineral waters, Geyser and Hathorn, bottled at the State owned Saratoga Springs under State supervision, are in great demand. Geyser is a delightful, natural means of reducing acidity and aiding indigestion caused by acid conditions. You feel cooler after drinking Geyser because it neutralizes acidity, checks sourness, counteracts gas, relieves headache and other worrisome distresses. Geyser demonstrates its benefits in a most decided manner when taken at big dinners or banquets. It is also delightfully effective as a restful and soothing drink just before retiring, particularly when you have overate or partaken of some food which has not digested properly. Hathorn, the natural laxative water, is decidedly useful taken before breakfast for giving the whole system a morning, internal cleansing, so that the body does not feel the heat during the day as it would if it were burdened with accumulations of undigested food and gasses and acids. Try the combination of these two health waters for a few days and see how much better you feel, how your appetite is improved, how you sleep better at night and how much more efficiently you work. Time to Prepare Now for Farming

State Supervisor of Agricultural Education Points Out Benefits of Farm School Training and What Some Graduates Have Accomplished.

"The present is a good time for a young man to prepare for farming," declared A. K. Getman, state supervisor of agricultural education, in his address at the opening of the annual conference of teachers of agriculture at the State Farm School at Morrisville. In emphasizing this point he continued:

"Farming like all other types of business, moves in cycles. Just now we are on the bottom side of the cycle curve. Since 1920 farming has been economically depressed. At present good farms can be bought cheaply. The young man who really likes farming and enjoys working in the open country with living things, may actually profit by the present hard times if he will prepare himself for the business. By the time he gets into full swing it is very probable that the farmer will enjoy better times. We make this conclusion because this is exactly what has happened in the past. In 1837, 1845, 1873 and 1896 there were hard times for farmers. In each case after a few years the cycle of better times returned. At present, farming has as many advantages as ever. Farm boys who have been willing to work have always been able to buy and pay for their farms."

In another part of his address Mr. Getman discussed the work of the six state farms schools and the departments of farm training in one hundred high schools of the state. He pointed out that city boys and country boys alike are getting a real future in America's basic industry. This year over 2,000 such boys are enrolled in the farm schools with definite intentions of farming. Over a 16-year period the graduates of the farm schools in the state are found to be farming in considerable numbers. For the state as a whole, 70 per cent of these men are found to be farming at the present time. He gave many illustrations of boys and young men who had taken farm school courses. "Concerning these cases he said in part:

"Watching the sheep graze in Prospect Park and observing the delivery truck leaving two bottles of milk on the doorstep each morning was the extent of Herbert Schaefer's experience with farming when in 1917 he entered the State Farm School at Farmingdale, L. I. At present he owns and operates a 188-acre farm and specializes in dairy cattle, poultry, sheep and alfalfa growing. For three years previous to buying his own farm he was superintendent of a large 500-acre farm in New Jersey. He declared recently that he intended to continue farming, and that the farm school training made it possible for him to obtain a good position, and later to operate his own farm. Another interesting case is that of Russell Sutton who graduated from the Cobleskill School in 1920. At present he is operating a large farm near Coxsackie. These cases are typical of hundreds that might be gleaned from the records of the agricultural schools."

Illegal Duck Shooting Stopped.

I believe that the constant prosecution of these violators has taught them a lesson."

Soul-Maddening Despair Follows a Midnight Adventure

LOOKING back on those terrible events now, Leonora feels that the cause of all her trouble was a foolish desire for excitement and thrills.

At sixteen she joined the chorus of a musical comedy. Then she met Carlos Mendosa and took the first fatal step that was to lead to tragedy. He attended the show nightly—sent her flowers and invitations to dinner. She was warned against Mendosa, but she was deaf to these warnings.

One night, she slipped away and met Mendosa at a little private dinner. What happened to her following that midnight adventure will rend your heart with pity—and fill you with rage that such things can be.

Leonora tells her story under the title, "Dark Secrets," in the August issue of True Story Magazine—one of the most gripping that has ever appeared in the pages of this great publication.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

POLAR BEARS IN SUMMER

"They say that we are very cross," remarked Mr. Polar Bear.

"I believe they speak correctly," answered Mrs. Polar Bear, as she shook her big head up and down and looked at Mr. Polar Bear.

"They say you are even more cross than I am," Mr. Polar Bear continued.

"That, too, is quite true, I believe," said Mrs. Polar Bear.

"It's a very hot day," said Mr. Polar Bear after a moment.

"It's a horrid day," said Mrs. Polar Bear, "and if I could get hold of the keeper I would tell him so."

"You mean," said Mr. Polar Bear, "you would go after him and goodness only knows what would become of him."

"Goodness wouldn't know, but I would," said Mrs. Polar Bear, her eyes looking very wild. "I would put a finish to him for making the day so hot."

"I don't believe it is his fault," said Mr. Polar Bear. "Then, too, he has tried to do his best for us. He has been giving us cake after cake of ice."

"Up North from where we came we can live on ice. What do little cakes of ice mean to me?" asked Mrs. Polar Bear.

"Besides I would like to get rid of some of my bad temper on the keeper. I don't care whether it is his fault or not. You're much milder than I am, Mr. Polar."

"It's foolish of you, too. I like to be considered a terror. I like to hear the keeper tell people that he can't make pets of the polar bears, and especially Mrs. Polar Bear."

"Yes, as I said before, we are cross," Mr. Polar Bear remarked. "But I think you are a little harsh on the keeper. Think how much hotter we would be if he didn't give us all this ice! And, too, while other animals are enjoying the heat, think how we get the better of them when it is cold, cold winter."

"It's a Horrid Day," said Mrs. Polar Bear.

"I never think of the winter in the summer, Mr. Polar," said Mrs. Polar.

"When it's hot I complain and I don't try to think of the cool days to come. Otherwise I'd be too patient—and patience isn't my strong point."

"But I'll tell you a secret," she added, as she played with another piece of ice the keeper gave her.

Mr. Polar Bear was cooling himself upon his piece of ice, and Mrs. Polar looked at him as she spoke.

"You have a secret to tell me?" asked Mr. Polar.

"Yes," said Mrs. Polar. "I will tell it to you. We're not very friendly at best—indeed we're far from it."

"We don't like the zoo much, especially when it is warm."

"We like the very far north where it is always cold and where even the little cub babies go into the icy water. But this is my secret, and it is the secret of many other Mrs. Polar Bears who live in zoos."

"We will not let any little polar babies come to the zoo. They are very seldom born in captivity—and none have ever been born here."

"I don't want the little ones to be brought up in this small space."

"I don't want them to have the hot summers."

"I don't want them to be captive."

"And that is my secret. It is part of my revenge on the zoo people."

"Now and again a Mrs. Polar Bear feels different. But not often."

"So that is the secret!" said Mr. Polar Bear. "Well, you're a wild one, all right."

"But here comes still more ice. That keeper is doing his best for us on this hot day."

"No more than he should do," said Mrs. Polar Bear, in a sad, sad voice.

Home, Sweet Home

"Darn it," growled Johnnie. "I'll be glad when I grow up and get away from these teachers who keep you in after school."

"Ho!" replied Willie, who came from that kind of a home, "about that time you'll be marrying a wife who'll keep you in at night."

RETAIL PRICES DROPPING.

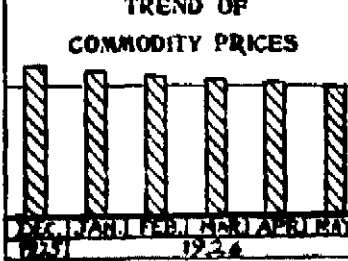

A notable feature of the present business situation is the steady drop since the first of the year in the relative value of retail prices. The month of June has gone quite a bit below the month of January in this respect. The point now is just how much farther—

If at all—this decline in the relative value of retail prices will go. Merchants now do not have the apprehension about being unable to obtain goods on short notice as was formerly the case. Where at all possible, we also find them now considering more the possibilities of "weather-proof" lines, by which is meant merchandise of such a character that its sales are relatively little affected by either unreasonably cold or hot weather. Apparently they are doing this in view of the abnormalities and uncertainties which many observers think will characterize weather conditions during the next few years. Retail sales in May were ahead of April according to the latest figures reported to the Federal Reserve System, while the total for the first five months of this year has been the largest on record. On the other hand, it is significant to note that weather conditions were generally more favorable for spring trade in May than in April.

Commodities Continue Lower.

Babson Park, Mass., July 6.—(Special)—If any one has the slightest doubt that at least some things are costing less now than they did even six months ago, they have only to refer to a commodity price chart. Commodity prices have sympathized with other things in the general business situation and have declined about 6 per cent since last December. Yet most things still cost far more in this country than things which are made abroad and sold over here, so that the unbalanced relationship in prices and production costs between this country and Europe is important.

From the living point of view, however, the downward trend of commodity prices is encouraging. Remaining in our comparison with the month of December last, we find that commodity prices have slowly but surely declined this 6 per cent during the six months up to the end of May, like a light of stars.

Give Boys Chance At State Fair

Program Arranged With View to Stimulating Interest of Boys in Farming—State Fair Begins August 30.

"The State Fair this fall presents a rare opportunity to New York's farm boys," said W. J. Weaver, supervisors of agricultural education of the State Department of Education, in his talk before the group of teachers of agriculture at their annual conference being held at the State School of Agriculture at Morrisville.

"The State Fair Commission and the State Department of Education are working hand in hand to make the events of the fair of as great educational value as possible and especially attractive to farm boys."

"To accomplish this aim," he continued, "a vocational school and judging contest has been arranged especially for the boys in the farm schools and farm training departments in high school. Each high school agricultural department and each state school may select a team of three boys and send them to the State Fair to take part in the judging contest. From among the 300 farm boys expected to take advantage of this opportunity, a team of four will be selected to be members of the State Champion Vocational Judging Team to represent New York in competition with all other states in judging dairy cattle at the National Dairy Show at Detroit in October."

Mr. Weaver has been appointed by the State Fair Commission as Superintendent of Department M in charge of Boys' Work at the State Fair. He was selected by the commission to expand this special department for boys because of his intimate contact with the farm boys through the agricultural schools and high school departments of agriculture and his five years' experience with school exhibits at the State Fair.

Continuing his talk he explained

"the excellent program that has been arranged and the details for handling the judging and the other events on the program for the boys at the fair. In concluding he said, "This is an opportunity that every teacher of agriculture should grasp. The State Fair is two weeks earlier this year than usual. It will begin on August 30th. The program offers events of unusual interest to every farm boy. The State Fair Commission has been generous in its grant of $300 in prizes for the judging and in addition $200 is set aside to pay the expenses of the four winners who make the State Team and go to the National Dairy Show. Each of the 100 odd teachers would do well to hold before the boys under his supervision in practical work this summer, membership on his school team as an inducement and an award for superior work done."

Measles More Of Menace Now

New York, July 6.—Measles, once considered a minor and almost un-escapable disease of childhood, caused approximately twice as many deaths during the month of May as the once dreaded diphtheria. Whooping cough was second in importance of diseases among children for that month. Its death rate was much higher than for diphtheria and it was charged with three and one-half deaths to every scarlet fever death during the month.

Many rates for these two diseases among the more than sixteen million industrial policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, according to the company's Statistical Bulletin, were inordinately high, although the measles rate dropped from 21.3 per 100,000 in April to 16.6 in May, and the whooping cough figure from 15.4 to 11.0.

That the relative danger of death from diseases of childhood has changed in the past few years is shown by considering the record for the month of May, 1920. In that month there was a diphtheria rate of 16.3 per 100,000, which was much higher than the figure then shown for measles and two and one-half times as high as the whooping cough death rate then recorded. This was so despite the fact that 1920 was a year of above-average mortality from both measles and whooping cough.

Pointing out the progress that has been made in conquering diphtheria, the Statistical Bulletin says: "While it is true that 1926, to date, has been a year of above-average prevalence of measles and whooping cough, it bids fair to mark a new minimum death rate for what has always been the most dreaded of the diseases of childhood, that is, diphtheria." The active campaign of immunizing children against this former scourge of childhood by administration of toxin-antitoxin is having a very definite effect in continuously reducing the deaths from diphtheria.

PRONOUNCING GLADIOLUS FINALLY DETERMINED.

At last a ruling has been given on the pronunciation of "gladiolus," which has made trouble for flower lovers for many years, says the New York Times. Various pronunciations are common, and the word is often corrupted into "gladiola" and even "gladiola." There has been so much confusion, indeed, that gardeners, to be safe, have resorted to calling the wonderful flowers simply "glads."

But the American Gladiolus Society has taken a hand. Hereafter, in America, the officially accepted pronunciation of "gladiolus" will put the accent on the "ol," despite the fact that most dictionaries call for the stress on "di." The society's decision is a compromise between the dictionary and the "gladiola" error that has so strongly taken root in popular speech.

"Gladi-OL-us," therefore, if you please. Plural, "Gladi-OL-i."

GOOD CATCHES OF TROUT.

Results of Stocking Shown in Several Counties.

Albany, July 6.—Inspector Carinus A. Johnston, whose district includes the counties of Albany, Schoenectady, Rensselaer, Columbia and Greene, reports to the Conservation Commission that many good catches of trout have been made in those counties since the streams opened, and that the streams are certainly yielding an increased supply from year to year.

He believes this is directly due to the stocking of these streams from the Warrensburgh fish hatchery. The protectors in their respective districts have assisted the same clubs in planting the fish in the proper places and in the proper manner.

A GOOD LITTLE KID

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SHE makes lots of noise lots of times.

At times when you're trying to read:

She asks you for nickels and dimes

For things she can't possibly need.

She doesn't do things she is told,

And does do the things you forbid.

And all of the day you must scold—

And yet she's a good little kid.

Her noise—well, it's innocent noise.

It's healthy, and happy, and glad;

She's rough, she's as rough as the boys,

And yet—well, it's nothing that's bad.

She doesn't say "Yes, ma'am" and "sir"

The way that you wish that she did;

You're worried a bit over her—

And yet she's a good little kid.

We worry a lot over things

That really don't matter so much;

And then ends the day, and it brings

The night with its tendered touch.

Then down on your knees you will fall,

Forgetting the things that she did—

For deep in your heart, after all,

You know she's a good little kid.

As Told by
Irvin S. Cobb

ENOUGH'S ENOUGH

IN SEPTEMBER of 1918 Col. Rosenman Bulger, then a major in charge of the press bureau of the A. E. F., was driving in his car up toward the front on the afternoon of a day when there had been hard fighting with the stubborn Germans. Limping down the high road on the way from the forward trenches to rest billets came a company of infantry, or what was left of it, just relieved after more than a week of practically continuous service under fire.

The officer in command was a lanky youth of perhaps twenty-two whose face was gray with exhaustion where it was not yellow with streakings of dried mud. He saluted Bulger, asking for something to smoke. He had been without tobacco, he said, for four days—without food, too, for most of that time; but tobacco was what he mainly craved.

Bulger left his car and he and the youth sat down together in a convenient shell hole to pass the time of day. Between long, grateful puffs on a cigarette of Bulger's providing, the youth discoursed of his recent experiences in the slow draw of a south-westerner.

"Major," he said, "we've had it pretty terrible tough these last few days—the Heines shelling us day and night, communication interrupted and liaison broken, nochow to speak of, no makin', no nothing except mud and wet and the chances of being blown into little scraps."

"As a matter of fact, I've had pretty rough sledding ever since I got over here, and that's more than a year ago. I haven't had any leave—they seem to have overlooked me when they were passing out the trips to Paris and other places—and I've been working my head off when I wasn't in the line on active duty. And now, finally, to top off with, we have this week up front."

"Where are you from?" asked Bulger.

"Texas," replied the youth. "Yes, sir, I was teaching school down there when we got into this war. I had a mother dependent on me, and while I wanted to go and do my bit I thought it better on my mother's account that I should wait until the draft took me. But while I was trying to decide Senator Morris Sheppard of our state came to our town and made a recruiting speech. He said it was high time we were satisfying our national honor. Well, sir, that phrase hit me right where I lived. The next day I went in as a volunteer, and after a spell I got a commission—and here I am, sitting in a mud hole in France."

"Major, I don't regret having done what I did do. If it was to do over again I reckon I wouldn't hesitate. But, major, as I look back on what I've gone through with ever since I landed, and more especially on what's happened to me lately, I don't mind telling you, in strict confidence, that my national honor is darn near satisfied."

Phoenix Players

Brydcliff Theatre at Woodstock Unable to Accommodate Audience Which Attended First Performance of Season—Shaw Comedy Well Presented by Star Cast.

"You Never Can Tell" was the title of the first play given this year by the Phoenix Players at the Brydcliff Theatre at Woodstock on Saturday evening before a record audience that not only filled the theatre but sat on the porch while others were unable to gain admission. The management sincerely regretted not being able to accommodate all of the guests. "You Never Can Tell" was the negative philosophy of dear old "William, the Waiter." While every person in the audience agreed with William about life in general, they also agreed at the final ringing down of the curtain that there was one thing they could tell, and that was that the evening's performance was just as big a success in a dramatic, entertaining and artistic way as it was in the record-breaking audience way.

The play itself is one of Bernard Shaw's best comedies in its cleverness of situations and conversations and in its offering to some young actor the chance to be a real man, genuinely loving a woman rather than having to be a staid sentimentalist.

There are several new people in this group of Phoenix Players besides those who were the real favorites last year.

One expected Ethel Griffies to be quite perfect as the sophisticated and up-to-the-minute mother, Mrs. Clandon, and the expected fully happened in this instance. Harold Moulton, as Finch McComas, (Mrs. Clandon's solicitor), was not only remarkably realistic, but quite surprised not only Mrs. Clandon but the entire audience by his genuinely feeling if dramatic plea for the father who had been denied the acquaintance and companionship of his three children for eighteen years.

The play opened with a scene in a dentist's operating room with a painfully real dental chair and as Frank on the stage and introduced Dolly Clandon (Rose Hobart), an inquisitive, perfectly natural and perfectly spoiled child, a vivid exponent of the idea "You Never Can Tell," and her brother Philip (William Allen) whose "experience of life," influence over his sister Dolly, and excellent advertising of his mother's book on the modern child, etc., were humorous and human. Besides these two former favorites, a new man appeared on the stage, Theodore St. John, playing the part of "Valentine," the dentist and later the impecunious lover. If Mrs. Clandon's daughter Gloria was a modernist in her education and thinking, outspokenly expressed, Valentine could easily go her one better. But Valentine had one advantage, at heart he was a fundamentalist and recognized the fact. Mr. St. John's working out of his own complicated personality and handling of his love affair were so perfectly natural and pleasing that throughout an evening of admirable acting by all, this young man's acting stood out distinctively as being very good.

Haroldine Humphreys did full justice to the part of poor Gloria, with the educated and rather sophisticated mind and untrained heart and emotions, and as always developed from the usual "best girl" character of modern drama into a character commanding the growing confidence and sincere admiration of the audience as well as their affection.

Then there was choleric old Fergus Crampton (Philip Leigh), the unknown father of Mrs. Clandon's (assumed name) children, whose incompatibility of temper had caused Mrs. Clandon to betake herself and children away from him, eighteen years before, though she maintained a realizing sense of the compatibility of his pocketbook. When he found his family, impossibly modern, his longing for their love and terror at their ways called forth both tears and laughter.

While all the world does indeed love a lover, so all that little world at Brydcliff Saturday evening loved "William, the Waiter." (Murray Kinell) whose cheerful and tactful philosophy of life made him a genuine if unconscious peace-maker and real friend, even if a "waiter."

Another mighty fine piece of acting was done by Edward Cooper as the mysterious "Mr. Bohun," a King's Counsellor and fearsome personage, who was the last character to appear upon the stage, the man who bullied to befriend and whose keen insight into human nature came as undoubtedly as an inheritance from his father, William, the Waiter, as from his judicial training, frequent and inconspicuous but very necessary was the part of the Maid, well played by Henrietta Goodwin.

There were many curtain calls at the close of the performance, including a call for Mr. and Mrs. Ben Webster and Edward Cooper, the two latter being responsible for the organizing and staging of the production. A very considerable part of the success of the performance on Saturday evening was also due to the new business manager, Richard S. Aldrich; the subscription secretary, Olivia D. Johnson, and William Miller, stage manager.

"You Never Can Tell" like the preceding play, will run two weeks, being given Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday evenings of this and next week, Saturday evening of next week, and Friday afternoon. The hours of beginning the performances are 8.45 and 2.45 p. m. Subscription or single tickets may be secured at The Governor Clinton Hotel, Kingston, or by telephoning to Woodstock, 175.

Jitney Players
At Woodstock

Wandering Troubadours Secured for Saturday Night Performance Under Auspices of The Phoenix Players—Their First Appearance in Northern New York.

The Phoenix Players are highly pleased to announce that they have been able to get the famous Jitney Players to play under their auspices for the first time in northern New York. The Jitney Players, wandering troubadours of the theatre, will bring their unique presentation of comedy, tragedy and fantasy to Woodstock, where they will play at the baseball field of the Athletic Club on Saturday evening, July 10, at 8.45, daylight time.

The Jitney Players are a group of young and gifted professional actors and actresses who have toured New England and Long Island during the past three summers.

Their stage is a canvas covered automobile truck, which can be quickly enlarged and set up in any field or garden. Their elaborate electrical equipment is carried in still another truck and the players themselves travel along by automobile. Many and various have been their adventures playing as they have been for many social and charitable affairs.

The cast will include Alice Keating and Bushnell Cheney of Cheney Silk Company family, originators of the project, and Richard Skinner, who has been associated with them in distinguished roles for three years. Also included are the original pioneers, back again this season. The Jitney Players also have a charming ingenue in the person of Frances Simpson, well known to Jitney Player audiences. Other members of this unusual organization are Joaquin Souther, Edgar Barrier, George Macready, Constance Smith, Dorothy Cott, Henry Bragdon and John Evans.

The plays this year have been rehearsed at Madison, Conn., headquarters of the Jitney Players, under the direction of David Belbridge, a distinguished member of Walker Whiteside's company, who came to America by way of the Orient, after he had acted in India, China, Japan and Honolulu. He will appear with the Jitney Players in several important roles, having gained experience in past summers at The Maverick.

Tickets for this performance will be on sale at The Governor Clinton Hotel news stand where Phoenix Players tickets are also on sale. The Phoenix Players have been kind enough to cancel their regular Saturday evening performance in honor of their guests.

Moon's Action at Poles

The naval observatory says that at either pole the moon is above the horizon continuously for about two weeks, and then below the horizon continuously for about two weeks. At the Arctic and Antarctic circles there are some years when for a few days in each month the moon does not set, and a few days in each month when it does not rise; otherwise at these circles it rises and sets daily. In the polar regions, during the winter months, the moon is generally above the horizon when it is full and below the horizon when it is new, and the reverse is the case during the summer months.

Bird Sacred to Indians

The ptarmigan, like the Indian, is susceptible to civilizing influence. Since the Indians of the Glacier National park reservation took up agriculture, this mountainous bird has come down into the valleys, even to mingle with the barnyard chickens and eat of the Indian's wheat.

The ptarmigan turns pure white like a snowshoe rabbit in the winter time, and the Indian has a sacred regard for the feathered creature in this immaculate transformation.

Britain Behind the Times

Britain contains more unclaimed money than any other country in the world. This is due to the complexity of civilization in the islands, the wandering habits of the race and, above all, to the lack of any system of distributing derelict wealth. Such a system exists everywhere else that counts; but in England, ownerless gold steadily accumulates year after year.

Fish Not Brain Food

Another old wives' tale in evidence is that fish is a brain food. For the same kind of food as meat, it is protein and fat. All food that is protein and fat nourishes the body because all of the organs draw food supply from the same source, the blood stream. Fish is no brain food than milk is a heart food or eggs an eye food, or carrots a food.—Hygeia Magazine.

Colonials Lose Black Sox Series

Local Club Takes Sunday Game From Boston Aggregation by 5-3 Score But Drops Two Games on the Fifth by 5-3 and 5-3 Scores—Phelpmen Play Loose Ball.

The Boston Black Sox, a colored aggregation of ball players from the city of Boston, took the long end of a three-game series from the Colonial Ball Club of this city over the holiday week end. The Colonials pulled the first game of the series out of the fire on Sunday by a 5-3 score but loose playing on Monday caused them to lose both ends of a double-header by 5-3 and 5-3 scores.

Art Smith, the Colonial's star hurler, pitched the Sunday game for the Phelpmen. Although Smith allowed only three hits on Sunday he was unusually wild, allowing nine men to reach first base on walks. This wildness combined with some inopportune bores on the part of the Colonial infield, gave the Black Sox five runs in the third inning of Sunday's game and sent them into the lead 5-3.

The Phelpmen staged a rally in their half of the sixth inning which netted them four runs. In the eighth they added three more runs to their total. After the third inning the Black Sox weren't able to get a look at the home plate and as a result the first game of the series was chalked up as a win for the Colonials, 9-5.

Lost Both Games Monday.

McMara, who pitched the Colonials to a win over the Hudson A. C. on Saturday, was given the assignment again on Monday morning. He pitched good ball but poor support on the part of his team mates caused him to lose the game. The Phelpmen made four errors behind him, three of which figured in the scoring.

The Black Sox started things off with a bang in the first inning by scoring three runs. The Colonials scored one in the first and then evened matters up in the second when they sent two runs across the rubber. That ended the scoring as far as the Colonials were concerned while the visitors proceeded to add two more to their grand total, one in the fifth and another in the closing stanza, giving the Black Sox the second game of the series by a 5-3 score.

The afternoon game found Clyde Russell on the mound. Russell got along in fine shape until he reached the seventh inning. Then a home run by Monchile of the Black Sox started the visitors off and at the end of that inning they had three runs to their credit. In the eighth they started off again and three hits plus a number of errors gave them three more tallies.

Boada, who the Colonials knocked off the mound on Sunday, was back in the box for the Black Sox. After a bad start in the first inning when the Phelpmen scored three runs he managed to weather the storm in fine shape. After the first all the Colonials could do was to score one in the third and another in the seventh. The final result of all this being that the visitors took the final game by an 8-5 score and likewise walked out of town with the three game series tacked to their mast head.

Millbrook Beat All-Stars, 9-5

Monday afternoon the Kingston All Stars were defeated at Millbrook by a 9-5 score.

The All Star Club started off and got five runs off Wicker, who was twirling in the first inning. After this he kept the hits widely scattered, and the locals could not push any men any further than the third sack. Wicker also fanned nine of the local batters.

The Millbrook club got twelve hits off Cragan and with the help of loose playing by his teammates the down river club shoved the winning runs over.

In the first frame the Millbrook club sent one man home, also one more in the third. The sixth was the real bad inning for the locals, two errors and three hits netted the Millbrook club five runs.

Two more tallies for the down river club in the seventh ended the scoring.

The way Wicker was hit in the first inning three doubles and a single it looked as if the All Stars were in for an easy day. Things changed when they got their five runs in the sixth.

PREPARE FOR BANTAM BOAT AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, July 6.—Jim Mallen, local promoter, today arranged a conference with the managers of Bud Taylor and Phil Rosenberg, to iron out details of the coming bantamweight championship fight.

Mallen, who operates a White Sox Park, has just given Chicago its first real boxing show seen here in twenty years, the Kansas-Mandell light weight title bout.

Mallen hopes to give the city its second big show probably late this month, with Bud Taylor and Phil Rosenberg fighting for the world's bantamweight crown. Rosenberg is the present titleholder.

Meeting with Mallen will be Eddie Long, Taylor's manager, and Harry Segel, who pilots the destinies of the champion. They have already come to terms with Mallen. The date of July 24 has been tentatively agreed upon for the bout, but this date must be approved by the commission.

Mallen estimates that Rosenberg and Taylor should draw a $100,000 sale. The champion, he said, will take the large end of the purse, Taylor getting not more than 12½ per cent.

All-Stars Lose At Po'keepsie

In one of the most exciting games ever played on the Hospital Grounds the Kingston All-Stars lost out 10-9. Robinson, who was pitching for the Hudson River Club, had the locals down to a no-hit, no-run game up to the fifth inning when Hurley, the All-Star second-sacker, got a safe blow. After this frame the locals went after him, sending two runs in the sixth and getting him to the showers in the seventh. Kaman, who relieved him, was also sent along with his teammate in the eighth. Eddie Phelan finished the contest when the All-Stars scored two runs off of him in the ninth. Out of the three twirlers the locals were able to connect sixteen safe wallops.

Hank Cragan went the entire route for the Kingston club and although nipped for fourteen hits, he kept them scattered. A couple of bad plays proved bad for the All-Star club. The Hospital club scored in the second inning on three safe blows, setting one run.

Again in the fourth they connected for four more wallops. One, a fluky home run by Russell gave the down river club four more runs, making a total of six.

In the fifth inning the locals got their first two runs on three hits. Lynch and Cragan, Smedes sending them across the rubber. In was in the seventh that Giant Robinson was removed. Hurley walked, Merritt singled and Lynch sent them both home on his hit. Cragan singled, sending Lynch across the plate. Smedes singled. Kaman was now twirling. With two on the sacks, two men out and the score six to five in favor of the down-river club, Dedzick had the count three and two on him. He fouled about seven balls. Finally he crashed out a two-bagger that sent the Kingston club ahead.

In their half of the seventh the hospital club tied the score making it 7 all. The eighth was the downfall for the locals when they made three errors together with two hits gave the down river team three more runs.

The locals got to Phelan who was on the mound in the ninth, for two runs, when they nipped him for five hits. Sickler was called out with the tying run on a very bad decision.

Shaw is Growing Old.
London, July 6.—George Bernard Shaw, often regarded as a sort of Peter Pan, has made the admission that he is growing old.

"I am too old for games, and the only game I expect to attend henceforth is my funeral," Shaw wrote to the officials of the Tudor parent at Brighton, who asked him to be their guest.

Education Vs. Taste

Decorations in matter of education. Taste alone is an unsafe guide, for what you once thought the acme of perfection sometimes becomes the relic of an immature age.

In sweet and loving memory of my dear mother, Rebecca Schoenmaker, who entered into rest July 4, 1925.

Surrounded by friends I am lonely—
In the midst of my pleasure I am blue—
A smile on my face, still a heartache—
Aching and longing for you.
You suffered much, mother dear,
But murmured not,
It is your gentle smile, your loving way,
We miss them more most every day,
Loving arms that enfolded us all—
Till one year ago when God sent his call.

Charges Workers Cheated Pinchot

Washington, July 6.—An army of political workers in Philadelphia "cheated" Gov. Pinchot and Senator George Wharton Pepper in Pennsylvania's recent $3,000,000 senatorial campaign. T. Henry Walnut, a Pinchot manager, told the senate slush fund committee today.

The workers took pay from the Pinchot and Pepper camps to get out votes, Walnut said, but their work was so futile, Representative William S. Vare rolled up one of the greatest pluralities ever recorded in a Philadelphia election.

While both Pepper and Pinchot were being "cheated," Walnut indicated, Vare was the only candidate to get his money's worth in Philadelphia.

"Then the Pepper organization so far as you observed, bought prizes and drew blanks in Philadelphia?" asked Senator Goff.

"I should say to a very considerable extent," Walnut replied.

The Pinchot organization spent $24,505 in Philadelphia after collecting $28,397, Walnut added. He explained there were some unpaid bills which would have to be settled out of the $3,392 balance.

Walnut said the forces of Senator George Wharton Pepper had spent many times as much as the Pinchot camp without success.

Walnut said he had "heard" that the Vare camp received contributions from the wets. Pressed for specific information, Walnut said he could give no exact details.

Worth While to Her

A southerner, transplanted from the South into New England, came out upon a scene of whirling, dancing, and revelry and proclaimed against the blasphemy of winter. Not so his little daughter, who, exultant, rejoiced in the brilliancy of the snow, exclaiming: "Now, I've got something to put under my new shoes!"

Agonization

Agonization is a name given to philosophers who assert that we have no knowledge except that which we acquire by means of our senses. It is said that the word agonization was introduced into our language by the late Professor Huxley, in the year 1880. It comes from the Greek agonize, meaning agonization.

Iceland—Land of Fire

Hot Springs Near Reykjavik.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

CARRYING ice to Iceland will appear to most persons about as reasonable as carrying wheat to the Dakotas, cotton to Texas, or baked beans to Boston.

But not long ago the Icelanders made an appeal to Norway, the nearest European country, to ship them ice in order that they might save their herding harvest from spoiling during a mild winter. There are other paradoxes in this supposed land of ice.

The land which has come down in history as Iceland might with more accuracy have been given a diametrically opposite title and called "The Land of Fire." The surface of no other country, perhaps, is so deeply marked by the withering blasts that well up from time to time; and in no country of equal area are to be found so many volcanic peaks and vents. Nearly 5,000 square miles of the 40,000 of the country's area are covered by lava flows.

Iceland is approximately the size of Ohio and about 8,000 square miles larger than Ireland. It is only a short distance off the European coast of Greenland, and its northernmost cape just touches the Arctic circle. From there the midnight sun can be seen. In spite of its position so near the North pole, Iceland, thanks to the Gulf stream, has a relatively mild winter climate. Reykjavik, the capital, is in the same latitude as Nome, Alaska, but has a January temperature milder than that of Munich, Germany, or Milan, Italy.

Icelandic summers, however, are cool, due to the large fields of ice that float down from the north. Grain cannot be grown satisfactorily, and all breadstuffs must be imported. Hay, potatoes and turnips are the only agricultural products of any importance. Cattle, horses and sheep are raised in considerable numbers, and large quantities of fish—chiefly cod and herring—are taken from the neighboring waters.

Interior a Waste of Lava.

Though Iceland has an extensive area, for all practical purposes it might just as well be only a seventh of its actual size. Although Europeans emigrated to Iceland about seven hundred years before Old World colonies were established in North America, only the valleys and lowlands near the coast of the island have ever been developed. This is not because of a lack of energy on the part of the hardy Scandinavians who settled the island, but because the interior, comprising about six-sevenths of the total area, is a waste of lava, boulders and gravel, devoid of vegetation.

The island is approximately 200 miles wide by 300 miles long, but hardly a habitation can be found more than 40 miles from salt water. There are no railroads, and few carriage roads. The inhabitants depend almost entirely on water transportation along the coast and in the many fjords.

No country on earth of equal size contains such varied and wonderful phenomena as Iceland. The glaciers of Switzerland; the fjords, salmon rivers and midnight sun of Norway; the volcanoes, grottoes and solfataras of Italy, on a grander scale; the mineral springs of Germany; the geysers of New Zealand; the largest waterfall, next to Niagara, in the world—all are here. Nowhere has nature been so speedily in giving a geological lesson to man. If there be sermons in stones, volumes lie unrolled here. Here we see her titanic forces at work building up a country. Nowhere else is it possible to study so well the geological conditions prevailing toward the close of the Glacial epoch in Europe.

Real Literature Developed.

Though Icelanders, faced by impassable natural forces and conditions, have been unable to achieve any great degree of physical development on their land-covered, short-sleeved island, they have made notable advances in literature and science. A truly remarkable literary development is springing up in this far northern island.

Throughout the 1,050 years of Iceland's occupancy by people of European extraction, it has been practically a country without cities. Life has centered in the scattered farmsteads, many of which today are somewhat feudal establishments, sufficient to themselves.

Reykjavik, the capital of Iceland near the southwestern corner of the island, facing Greenland. This community of 15,000 inhabitants is the only place on the island that can claim the title "city."

Pilsudski Takes Hostile Stand

"Every Pole Must Be a Soldier. Armed to the Teeth" and "Every Polish Home Must Be a Fortress" Appears in Pilsudski's Paper.

Warsaw, July 6.—"Every Polish home must be a fortress." This beligerent statement appearing today in Marshal Pilsudski's newspaper, Polska Zbrojna, was interpreted here as indicating a more vigorous foreign policy on the part of Poland, with possible vital international developments.

"Poland's just rights are not satisfied by the Versailles Treaty," declared Marshal Pilsudski's newspaper, which is regarded as the official organ of the present regime.

"Poland cannot abandon her claims to Breslau, Oppeln, Ennsberg and Stettin," declared the newspaper.

"Every Pole must be a soldier, armed to the teeth. Every Polish home must be a fortress."

This is the most beligerent statement on foreign affairs that has yet emanated from Pilsudski's sources and would indicate further complications in Poland's already confused international situation.

There had been some anticipation that Poland would seek alliances with Germany, Russia and Hungary but it would appear now that Marshal Pilsudski has about made up his mind to launch forth on a program bound to antagonize his neighbors.
